Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Architecturally, an original successfully developed and sited example of a common suburban prototype which is particularly well represented in Essendon (see also Hunt Crescent); of regional importance.

Historically, little is known of the Mould family except their apparent origination from another Western suburb.

Physical Description 1

Set on a Y plan, this ashlar-pattern boarded house has two gabled bays, facing the street. A third gable surmounts the bullnose roofed verandah, which spans between the two room bays and a minor bay which forms the entrance. Characteristically intricate ornament consists of cast-iron friezes and turned timber post to the verandah, friezes to window hoods, and saltire -cross balustrading, half-timbering and gable finials complete the Queen Anne styling. The hillside site is well suited by the bayed nature of the design. An unusually complete club-head picket fence and gate was at the frontage (part disassembled at inspection) whilst the main garden elements appeared to be original.

Integrity

Generally original except for colour scheme and dismantled fence.

Physical Description 2

Streetscape

Part of an Edwardian period subdivision with both Queen Anne and Bungalow styled houses comprising much of the street.
