Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

92 Dennis Street is a typical bi-chrome Victorian brick villa in a suburb better known for its timber buildings. The roof tower or lookout is unusual and has been repeated on a limited number of buildings in the state: there is nothing like it elsewhere in Northcote.

Physical Description 1

92 Dennis Street is a polychrome brick, double-fronted house with a slated hipped roof which extends into what was probably the timber walls of a tower or lookout. Two symmetrically placed chimneys extend above the tower roofline and a concave roof verandah, supported on cast iron columns and brackets, adorns the north face.

The building is externally substantially intact with the exception of the tower roof and part of the frieze work; the chain wire fence was installed in 1982 along with security shutters to openings.

This place/object may be included in the Victorian Heritage Register pursuant to the Heritage Act 2017. Check the Victorian Heritage Database, selecting 'Heritage Victoria' as the place source.
