Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

What is significant?

The brick villa at 36 Jenkins Street, Northcote, built in 1891 for the brickmaker, Henry Feary (Fairy). Non-original alterations and additions are not significant.

How is it significant?

The brick villa at 36 Jenkins Street, Northcote is aesthetically significant to Darebin City.

What is significant?

It is aesthetically significant (Criterion E) as a substantially intact and richly decorated bi-chrome brick Boom period villa located with other villas on the eastern limits of Victorian Northcote (Croxtton) and recalling with them the locale's pre-eminence as a brick making centre. It is important also as one of a pair of similar houses with no. 34, imparting character to the street.

Property Number

Physical Description 1

A pretentious bi-chromatic brick villa with bull nosed verandah to the facade and side elevation having cast iron columns and a pedimented break-fronted section in the centre with lacework to the frieze and tympanum. The west end wall is in the form of a parapeted party wall with vermiculated ends to the copings. There is a hipped corrugated colorbond roof and symmetrical chimney stacks.

The brickwork is closely comparable with the existing villa at no. 34, the treatment of the window spandrels being plain.

Integrity

Condition: Sound. Integrity: High.
