SIGNIFICANCE: »Principle centre for active recreation in Hamilton,; memorial to W H Melville, Hamilton's leading citizen at the time and one of its most distinguished in its history.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Grandstand
Melville Oval

The Melville Oval grandstand is of local significance for its historical associations with various sports and recreational pursuits and for the elegance of its Edwardian architecture. A Band Rotunda, since relocated to the Botanic Gardens, once stood beside it. The low lying area north-west of Lonsdale Street was originally reserved for market purposes when it was thought that Lonsdale street would be Hamilton's commercial centre. By 1902

there were moves to beautify the area and use it for recreation. Led by W H Melville then Hamilton's leading citizen, this push was thwarted until the death of its main opponent, Cr R S Bree. ([i]) Frank Hammond the Town Clerk and Engineer was probably responsible for the design. The development of the oval was significant because the City of Hamilton had to take out a considerable loan to fund the works. Melville Oval, named after its generous champion, was opened in 1909 by the Hon J Murray, Premier of Victoria. ([ii])

The oval and the grandstand have been in constant use ever since. The surrounding plantings and the various ornaments including the memorial gates are important landscape elements which support the grandstand, now the major building in the reserve. Melville Oval is a focus for the City of Hamilton and is the centre for the Conservation Area surrounding it.

The grandstand has been refurbished and additions at the back now include a small function area. ([iii]) The building is substantially intact and in good condition. The removal of the Band Rotunda and alterations to the fabric of the Grandstand have diminished the integrity of the complex.
