Statement of Significance

Last updated on -

Architecturally, both representative of a common type and distinguished amongst that type by its associated outbuildings. Historically, briefly linked with the Marquand family who were both quarrymen and apparently architects also by its form perhaps suggestive of tradesmen's home and workshop (?).

Physical Description 1

One of the many simple Italianate styled timber cottages which line the streets of western suburbs like Kensington, Yarraville and Footscray, this example is distinguished by its larger than normal site, collection of associated outbuildings and the relatively original condition of the complex. The veranda retains its cast iron and timber details and paint remnants display early colours.

Integrity

External Integrity

Fence and a verandah post have been replaced, notched boards on the facade indicate possible renovation early this century, possibly coinciding with the erection of the gabled wing on the east.

Physical Description 2

Streetscape

A narrow street, lined with double-fronted villas similar to this one, most altered in detail. Nearby is the stone 2 Gledhill Street, presumably indicating the start of the street's development.
