Statement of Significance

Last updated on - May 19, 1999

What is significant?

In 1853, a Roads Act established toll-bars on roads throughout Victoria. The Act empowered District Road Boards (from 1854, the Central Roads Board) to collect fees on their boundaries to be used for the upkeep of local council roads. It is probable that the Maldon Road Toll-Bar House originated subsequent to 1858, at which date Maldon was declared a municipality. By the early 1870s, the toll-bar system was proving uneconomical and the number of toll bars declined until, in 1877, the Victorian Government discontinued the system of toll-collection. In March that year, the trustees of the Muckleford Cemetery applied to the United Shire of Maldon for possession of a toll-bar house, and for financial assistance to relocate it to the cemetery for use as a lodge. Their request was granted and the toll-bar house was relocated. The entry portico of the toll bar house is constructed from the toll collectors' shelter which stood opposite the house when in its original location.

How is it significant?

The Maldon Road Toll Bar House is of historical importance to the State of Victoria.

Why is it significant?

The Maldon Road Toll Bar House is historically important due to its association with the development of local government and transport infrastructure in Victoria. The toll-bar house is a very rare artefact of an administrative system designed to raise revenue for the upkeep of Victoria's roads.

General Exemptions:

General exemptions apply to all places and objects included in the Victorian Heritage Register (VHR). General exemptions have been designed to allow everyday activities, maintenance and changes to your property, which don't harm its cultural heritage significance, to proceed without the need to obtain approvals under the Heritage Act 2017.

Specific exemptions are tailored to the conservation and management needs of an individual registered place or object and set out works and activities that are exempt from the requirements of a permit.
