Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 3, 1999

The former Pleasant Creek Court House, built in 1859, is identified by Court Houses in Victoria A Survey as the best and most intact example of four identically planned court houses in the Victorian Free Classical style with projected entry and gable roof.

The building, used as a court house for a short time before the shift of population resulted in another court house built in 1877 and 1878 at Stawell East, is an important reminder of the transient goldfields population and its effect on the government building program.

The former court house retains the internal layout of court room, offices, Judges chambers, prisoners cell and interview room. The court room retains none of its furniture or fittings although the retention of the entry windlock and visitors gallery mezzanine enhances the significance of the building.

The building is important in the history of police administration in Victoria as, after removal of the court to the Stawell East building in 1878, it was used as a Mounted Constables quarters during the period when Stawell was the headquarters of the Wimmera Police District.

Permit Exemptions

General Exemptions:

General exemptions apply to all places and objects included in the Victorian Heritage Register (VHR). General exemptions have been designed to allow everyday activities, maintenance and changes to your property, which don't harm its cultural heritage significance, to proceed without the need to obtain approvals under the Heritage Act 2017.

Places of worship: In some circumstances, you can alter a place of worship to accommodate religious practices without a permit, but you must notify the Executive Director of Heritage Victoria before you start the works or activities at least 20 business days before the works or activities are to commence.

Subdivision/consolidation: Permit exemptions exist for some subdivisions and consolidations. If the subdivision or consolidation is in accordance with a planning permit granted under Part 4 of the Planning and Environment Act 1987 and the application for the planning permit was referred to the Executive Director of Heritage Victoria as a determining referral authority, a permit is not required.

Specific exemptions may also apply to your registered place or object. If applicable, these are listed below. Specific exemptions are tailored to the conservation and management needs of an individual registered place or object and set out works and activities that are exempt from the requirements of a permit. Specific exemptions prevail if they conflict with general exemptions.
