Significance of Individual Property

1. Architecturally significant for the fine render detailing to a typical garden villa form.
2. Historically significant in the illustration of the importance of the tower as the image of a mansion in the boom 1880s.
3. Significant for its contribution to the St. James Park Estate/
4. This brick residence, begun in 1874 and virtually rebuilt in 1891, has historical significance for its association with the Hawthorn pioneer, jeweller, winegrower and politician, Henry Sallows Walsh (1804-1877), from 1874 until his death. It has significance, also, for its associations in the early 1890s with Archibald Davidson, owner also of the 1880s houses opposite at 23-27 Shakespeare Grove.

HO163 St James Park Estate, Hawthorn

The St. James Park Estate, Hawthorn, is an area of heritage significance for the following reasons:

- The place is a Victorian-era mansion estate, developed in the second half of the nineteenth century as Melbourne's wealthier residents sought accommodation away from industry and the cramped living conditions of the inner-city, in a more physically desirable location, but still close to the city. Several of the streets offer broad views of Richmond and Hawthorn East.

- The place contains an exceptional number of individual buildings of historical and architectural merit including Victorian-era mansions as well as large Federation and interwar-era dwellings. Individually significant buildings include Invergowrie and its gate lodge, the Glucksburg trio, Hawthorn House and Zetland.

- The place has important historical associations with Sir James Palmer who erected Burwood (now Invergowrie), and George Coppin who subdivided and sold the area in 1871-1982.

- The place is representative of the growth of Hawthorn as a Victorian garden suburb from the 1850s up until to the interwar period.

- Development in the area also reflected its proximity to rail links (from the early 1860s) and the development of the tram network (c. 1912-3).
