Physical Description 1

The former Charsfield at 41 Cassels Road, Brunswick is a Victorian asymmetrical painted rendered villa with a hipped slate roof and quoining to the corners of the front elevation. The roof has iron finials at the extremities of the hip. There are also a number of unpainted rendered chimneys with decorative caps and terracotta pots. The return verandah has a corrugated iron roof and cast iron columns with cast iron lacework. The verandah fascia features a scalloped decoration. There are decorative brackets under the eave line. The front bay window has a larger double hung sash window flanked by two narrow versions of the same. A decorative moulded relief 'sill' links the windows.

The garden retains very little mature vegetation, with the exception of a Quercus palustris (Pin Oak) in the centre of the front garden.

The front boundary is enclosed by a cast iron palisade fence and gates with a bluestone plinth.
