Physical Description 1

The first Holy Trinity Anglican Vicarage appears to have been built in 1864 to the design of S W Smith who called tenders in March of the year. This building was clearly of basalt, complementing the church and school already on the site. It underwent extensive alterations in the early twentieth century, when a brick addition and a timber verandah were built.

The Vicarage is part of the significant Holy Trinity complex, which includes the church, parish hall and school, and the second Vicarage built in 1941 (refer to separate citations in this Study)
