Statement of Significance

Last updated on - January 1, 2008

104 Melville Road, Brunswick West, is of local historical and architectural significance. One of the few 19th century houses built on Donald Melville's estate, which had been subdivided in the late 1880s, but which remained largely undeveloped for many years. Architecturally, it is a particularly intact example of a large 1890s Italianate house, which retains its original fence and other plantings.

Physical Description 1

104 Melville Road is a large two storey Italianate bichrome brick house. Its walls are of face red brick with cream brick string courses and window dressings. Asymmetrical in plan, the house has a return verandah and balcony with a skillion corrugated iron roof and cast iron lacework frieze and balustrading between coupled turned timber posts. A projecting polygonal bay on the west facade has, on each level, three timber-framed double-hung sash windows with rendered sills. A unpainted rendered frieze of small bosses separates the two levels of windows. The hipped slate roof has bracketed eaves and is penetrated by bichrome brick chimneys with rendered bases and cornices.

The property retains an unusual wrought iron fence and gate and pittosporum hedge.

Key Architectural Elements: distinctive 19th century bichrome brick design original ornate cast iron balcony and verandah original slate and corrugated iron roofing

Conservation Guidelines: retain original garden elements

Principal Historic Themes: significant phases in the development of towns and suburbs; 19th century speculative building activity
