Statement of Significance

Last updated on - January 1, 2008

The former St Paul's School is of local historical and architectural significance. It was one of the first schoolhouses in Coburg and the northern part of Melbourne and it forms part of an historic group of Roman Catholic buildings. Although its integrity has been compromised, it is in a good state of preservation with its alterations reflecting the generations of pupils which have passed through it. The simple structure is a fine example of traditional building skills in bluestone dating from the mid-19th century.

Physical Description 1

The former St Paul's School is a simple T-shaped single-storey rough-faced ashlar bluestone building with a gabled slate roof. It has timber sash windows, with non-original glass, and simple timber bargeboards to the gable-ends. There is a slate-roofed gabled porte-cochère, of unknown origin, on its north elevation, and weatherboard additions to the rear. The school is located within an historic group of Catholic buildings.

Key Architectural Elements:

simple single storey bluestone building
slate roof

Conservation Guidelines:

reinstate original glazing to windows preferably remove porte-cochère at northern end of building preferably remove signage

Principal Historic Themes:

Provision of education Establishment of permanent places of worship
