Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 7, 2004

The church building has been removed from site. The site is of local interest as the site of the St Peter's Catholic Church.

Significance

St. Peter's has architectural significance to the City of Casey as one of the few well-preserved examples of simple timber religious architecture in the City and local historical significance as an example of the importance of church organisations in the development of the coastal township of Tooradin during the inter-war years.

Physical Description 1

St Peter's Catholic Church has been removed from this site.

Description

This gabled weatherboarded church is set on small rise next to the Tooradin public hall. It has pointed arch windows, obscured glazing, a triptych window at the altar end, and gabled porches. There are some residual native plants in the grounds. The church is well-preserved for its age and its construction material (timber).
