The Former E.S. & A. Bank, Camberwell Junction was erected in 1885. The contractor was Alfred George Moore and the architects were Wardell and Vernon. The two storey brick structure has a simple slate clad roof with stepped gables. The main entrance to the building is from Riversdale Road and is expressed by a projecting vestibule. The Burke Road elevation contains a centrally located bay window on the ground floor. Stylistically this bank is reminiscent of the Northern European architecture and is unique in Victoria. It belongs to a group of former E. S. & A. Banks which in their unusual styling and their association with a particular bank constitute a highly significant group. The Bank is also an important example of the work of Wardell and Vernon.
