Statement of Significance

Last updated on - July 7, 2008

Statement of Significance: The 1942-3 radio station complex Broadcast House, because of its high external integrity (and internally in part), is representative of the early development of radio in Victoria. It was designed by the country's foremost acoustics authority, architect H Vivian Taylor. It is of historic significance as it was built specifically to meet the home-front and overseas propaganda needs of war-time Australia, and continues to be the home of the A.B.C.

Caretaker's Cottage

Statement of Singificance: Constructed in about 1887 as a caretaker's cottage, this attractive bichrome brick structure is a rare surviving example in the C.B.D. of a small nineteenth-century cottage, and the last intact link with the West Melbourne Presbyterian Church (1886, removed 1935). It was subsequently adapted as a studio in the A.B.C. complex.
