Statement of Significance

Last updated on - April 11, 2008

Built in 1891 to the design of Public Works Department architects JR Brown and WF Cazaly working under the supervision of HR Bastow, it is of local architectural and historical significance. The station is a notable example of the "Queen Anne" residences within the area. Built in a period of suburban expansion from the 1890s, it has been associated with many events in Northcote's history and with the history of the police force in Victoria. Located on a prominent position on Rucker's Hill, the building is a local landmark and forms part of a historic precinct with other red brick buildings of the 1890s.
