Statement of Significance

Last updated on - May 14, 2004

A six-bay church designed by T J Crouch and opened in 1858, notable for its use of small-scale bluestone rubble of the type inaccurately known in the nineteenth century as "cyclopean" interspersed with cement dressings. The main facade embraces a bellcote (since removed), flanking pinnacles and arch, with nailhead moulding, containing a tripartite lancet window and doorway.
