Designed by F de Garis and Son in 1893 for Andrew Black, the house was a substantial late nineteenth century addition to the St Vincent Place building stock. It is two storeyed and has decorative cast iron over bichromatic brickwork. The plan form is elegant with a corner front door placement and represents a transition from the Victorian to Edwardian planning. The interior has fine and intact decorative plasterwork and the front hall is distinguished with pedimented doorways and highly decorated covered ceiling.
