SiteCard data copied on 19/06/2024:

What is significant?

While a reassessment of the site's significance was beyond the scope of the current project, it should be noted that:

- No archaeological features or deposits were identified during the site inspection.
- The results of this survey – of which this site inspection formed a part – will contribute to an Environmental Effects Statement (EES) currently being prepared for the proposed Warracknabeal Energy Park (wind farm). This report will include a recommendation that council (Yarriambiack Shire) consider including the survey tree on the Heritage Overlay.

How is it significant?

A reassessment of the site's significance was beyond the scope of the current project. Additional research, including comparative analysis - beyond the scope of the current project - would be required to determine type and level of significance exhibited.

Interpretation of Site	Probable nineteenth-century survey tree - likely associated with the 1875 Antwerp to Werrigar road survey. [Please Note: This revised site card is being submitted primarily as a record of the site's current condition, address and spatial location – see attached .shp file recording the site's location and proposed extent. A detailed site analysis was beyond the scope of the current project.]

History

The survey tree is not illustrated on any historic maps or plans viewed as part of research conducted to date. The results of historic research carried for the broader project (i.e., Historical Heritage Assessment, Warracknabeal Energy Park; in preparation) indicates that: - The survey tree is not likely to be associated with the early pastoral period. Specifically, while located within the Warracknabeal Pastoral Run, the site/survey tree does not form part of the run's surveyed boundary (see 'Survey of Warracknabeal Station' (1857)). - The survey tree is most likely associated with the 1875 Antwerp to Werrigar road survey. Specifically, the survey tree is located within a road reserve (Antwerp Road) that was first surveyed in 1875 (see attached map; DLS, 1875). [Please Note: This revised site card is being submitted primarily as a record of the site's current condition, address and spatial location – see attached .shp file recording the site's location and proposed extent. Historic research carried out to date was limited to: a search of historic maps and plans currently available online; and, historic research carried for the broader project (i.e., Historical Heritage Assessment, Warracknabeal Energy Park; in preparation)]. This place/object may be included in the Victorian Heritage Register pursuant to the Heritage Act 2017. Check the Victorian Heritage Database, selecting 'Heritage Victoria' as the place source.
