Statement of Significance

Last updated on - May 24, 2004

A two-manual organ of 11 speaking stops built in 1891 by Fincham & Hobday and remaining essentially intact, retaining its original mechanical action, detached drawstop console, tonal scheme and pipework. The instrument has a particularly attractive three-tower case containing diapered pipes, similar in design to that in the Uniting Church, Balaclava, built in the same year by the same firm.
