Aesthetic value

Avenue of 28 trees running north-south through centre of Ballarat Botanical Gardens was planted about 1872. The avenue forms a striking feature of the gardens, bordering the central avenue. Most trees are straight, well formed trees with a typical height of 25 metres. Towards the northern boundary of the gardens, the path disappears and the trees continue into the picnic area.

2011: Removal and replacement of 19 trees to reconstruct avenue. 20 of original trees remain.
