Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 10, 2004

Rare or localised
Outstanding size

Located on the north-west corner of the Glen Eira Town Hall, this is a large, vigorous specimen, rare in cultivation. The Kaffir Plum is a native evergreen South African tree that grows up to 15 metres tall, and is usually found in riverine forests. The main stem is clean and straight, but the forest form often has supporting buttress roots. The bark is smooth when young, becoming rough, dark grey-brown as it grows older.
