Statement of Significance

Last updated on - June 30, 2004

Aesthetic significance
Outstanding example of species

An outstanding specimen which has grown into an excellently formed tree with a wide-spreading globular crown. Its location in a prominent position of a large public garden contributes to its landscape significance. The Jacaranda is a commonly planted species in the MILDURA region, both in gardens and as street trees, but this tree is the largest and finest example observed in the area.
