Last updated on - July 5, 2004

Rare or localised
Outstanding size
Outstanding example of species
Outstanding specimen

The land was settled in the 1920s by the Williams family who operated a nursery until the 1960s. The nursery was operating at its peak in the 1950s and was purchased by the State Government in 1984. The site has many fine exotic and rare or uncommon trees. This Nothofagus solandri (Black Beech) is an outstanding specimen, forming a dense rounded crown, and is an important feature in the landscape. The species is rare in cultivation and the only other known trees are smaller single specimens in the Royal Botanic Gardens and Pirianda. No other tree has the size or form of this impressive tree. The tree is in good condition, with minor dead wood.
