Interpretation of Site	Heritage Inventory Interpretation: The church was a weatherboard building supported on stumps with a corrugated iron roof. A pathway lead from the road, up some log steps, through an entrance in the post and rail front fence to the front of the church. The former position of the church is marked by the convergence of three surviving pieces of evidence: the termination of the pathway on the north side, an inverted L-shaped mound on the east side with an alignment of stones and in situ post, and three stumps in an alignment on the west side.
