Statement of significance

This vessel is historically significant as it represents a type of vessel, being an early Australian built wooden cutter that was employed in the intrastate trades around Australia. Its archaeological significance is difficult to determine as the location of the site is unknown but it could be significant in yielding information about the way in which an early Australian built cutter was constructed if the site is located.

VHR history

Went to pieces in heavy surf. In 1855 was trading between Melbourne and Geelong. In 1858 brought a cargo of oysters to Geelong from Corner Inlet. In 1862 plied regularly between Indented Head and St Kilda pier. In 1867 traded between Geelong and King Island. Captain Richard Leggett, in 1841 a pioneer of Queenscliff trade, owned Ben Bolt and Clara ; salvaged Netherby; won Portland Cup 2 years in succession with yacht Mischief. Actively engaged with brother Thomas (a previous owner of Ben Bolt) in lighthouse and other government services. Salvaged many wrecks.

 The cutter was wrecked at Frankston, Sept 7, 1874. Left Schanpper point on September 5 with a cargo of timber for Melbourne. Vessel encountered severe gale and was unable to stand under canvas. Vessel drifted all night until about 2 miles off Frankston. Sail was raised and an effort was made to try and regain Schanpper point. Cargo shifted and the vessel became unmanageable. Vessel was driven into St Davids Bay and became a total wreck.
